

Speaker Biography: Amy Xia is currently an Associate Professor of Supply Chain & Operations Management at the D'Amore-McKim School of Business of the Northeastern University at Boston. Her research interests include supply chain competition and market segmentation, supply chain coordination, sourcing planning, and risk management. In recent years, she has extended her research topic to include sustainability performance as a decision factor in supply chain management. She has published papers in various journals such as Management Science, Production and Operations Management, European Journal of Operational Research, and IIE Transactions. She has served as a guest editor for Annuals of Operations Research and International Transactions in Operational Research.