Speaker Bio:
Raja Roy is an assistant professor in Innovation and Entrepreneurship at NJIT. His research explores the role of firm-level capabilities, such as access to complementary technologies and in-house users, during technological disruption in high-tech industries. His research on machine tools, industrial robotics, and image sensors has been published (or is forthcoming) in Strategic Management Journal, Strategic Entrepreneurship Journal, Research Policy, Journal of Engineering and Technology Management, Technological Forecasting and Social Change, and IEEE Transactions on Engineering Management.